LET US HEAR FROM OTHERS

I saw in last week's issue of the Antioch News an item referring to Hoodlums disturbing and causing the ending of a very good and instructive speech, as well as the best music this community has ever been treated to and many drove miles to listen to, and the Editor should be commended in taking the stand he has in the matter.

Antioch is one of the beauty spots of the United States, located in the chain of lakes and many visitors spend their summer here and spend thousands of dollars with us and expect some entertainments in return.

I would like to ask where the marshal was during that time and why it was not his place to be near during a crowd of that kind?

The marshal is an appointive officer and the Trustees have nothing to do with giving him orders, and while I have been sitting as a Trustee for about eighteen months, there has been but one arrest and the dust on the cot is so thick they are nearly hidden and might be sold for junk.

I would also like to ask why speeders are allowed with wide open mufflers to race back and forth day and night, endangering old men and ladies and little children who should be protected, and as the board has voted unanimously to stop this, why hasn't this been done.

I have seen cars left entirely alone and left running for over half an hour and its against the law, and cars have been left on crossings and I myself have given order to move them.

I would like to ask why some people can go without meters and others are compelled to put them in?

Count your days in the Village and then count the receipts.

Why is the standpipe placed in the lowest spot and parts of the sewer run overland?

Why was the city hall sold and the proceeds paid out in rent?

Why was one thousand dollars spent for pipe and laid out to rust?

Answer these questions and then you will know why Antioch is bonded to the limit. You can't go higher and its beyond me.

Very truly,
L. B. Grice.

The above communication hits the popular spot by asking the same questions that the public is asking themselves every day. This same line of talk can be heard upon the streets at any time, but so far we have failed to hear an answer. If you know the answer send it in.

If anyone else has anything to say on either side of the subject we will be glad to print their side of the story. Let us hear from any one interested in the welfare of Antioch.

Beer Consumed by Flames at Woodstock

Thirteen thousand, four hundred and fifty-two bottles of real before-the-war beer went up in smoke Saturday at Woodstock. The anti-bachanal ceremony was conducted by State's Attorney B. S. Lumley after orders for the destruction of the joy juice had been issued by Judge Barnes.

The night before the ceremony some thirty soul with an auto truck embroiled 137 cases of the confiscated fluid. Before the conflagration Attorney Lumley mounted the pile of cases and barrels and delivered an oration on the penalties which would be inflicted on the thieves if they were found.

As the flames mounted to the sky, bottles of beer shot into the air like popcorn.

Contentious Never Popular.
The wise man in Israel has truly said: "A fool's lips enter into contention," and the contentious fool is as common a nuisance today as he was no doubt in the olden ones. Usually in proportion to their lack of actual knowledge do such persons presume to set themselves up as dictators to their neighbors.

Plane Company Lease Flying Field

The Curtis Airplane corporation has leased the Judge C. C. Edwards-Eugene M. Runyard farm of 101 acres just north of the golf grounds and will begin the immediate construction of three or four hangars, and will use the farm as a flying and demonstration field. This transfer means the further development of the airplane industry on a commercial basis and is of vital importance to Waukegan.

Another important feature of the transaction is that it brought out the fact that Lee Hammond of Chicago, formerly a lieutenant at Great Lakes, where he had complete charge of the aviation branch, has complete charge of the sales department and will also superintend the flying field, maintaining an office in Chicago and flying from there to Waukegan whenever the business on the local flying field demands.

Mr. Hammond does not care for automobiles and will make all his trips via airplane, as autos ride too rough to suit his fancy.

Mr. Hammond and Messrs. Daly, local manager and superintendent, and Davies, vice president, inspected the field Saturday and promptly leased it as an ideal demonstration field. The machines, which will be assembled in their factory in the Manufacturers Terminal, will then be taken to the field where they will be tested out and demonstrated to customers. When a sale is made, the machines will be flown from the field to wherever they are to be delivered.

F. B. Huber Heads Local Salvation Army Drive

The big Salvation Army drive begins September 22 and will close September 29. During that week Lake county is expected to raise $16,000, and Antioch's share of that amount is $400.

The money thus raised will be spent for the benefit of:

- Slum Settlements.
- Rescue Homes for Wayward girls.
- Maternity hospitals rescue homes.
- Industrial homes.
- Workingmen's hotels.
- Children's homes.
- Christmas dinners to poor families.
- Young women's boarding houses near factories.

- Fresh air camps.
- Free medical dispensaries.
- Prison work.
- Temporary relief work.
- Soldiers' and Sailors' aid.
- Chas. T. Ford is acting as county chairman, and has appointed local chairman as follows:

- Antioch—F. B. Huber.
- Avon—Harry Wheeler.
- Cuba—Walter A. Linn.
- Grant—Mrs. E. L. Rushmore.
- Libertyville—Geo. H. Cooper.
- Warren—C. N. Brown.
- Waukegan—J. A. Haas.
- Lake Villa—F. M. Hamlin.

Charles Moran of the telephone company, who was a captain in the signal corps overseas, will make a visit to every school in Lake county outside of Waukegan and will make a personal appeal. It is predicted that the amount required will be raised in double quick time.

Garage to be Sold at Auction in Burlington

Saturday, Sept. 20, the A. Zwiebel Jr., garage will be sold at auction. It is situated on main trunk highway, 75 miles from Chicago. Shows a business of $60,000 a year. Is modern, steam heat, fully equipped machine, repair and paint shop, offices and show rooms. Building is "L" shaped. Frontage 73 feet, length 114. Teams $3,000 cash, balance on easy payments.

Wheat Always Preferred Food.

While more people are living in the world today dependent upon rice than upon wheat for subsistence and a greater number of the human family live upon millet than any other cereal food, wheat is the preferred food among the higher civilized peoples. The more progressive peoples of the earth have ever been wheat eaters. Grains of wheat have been discovered in Egyptian tombs of the first dynasty, dating back 4,000 B. C., while bread of wheat has been excavated from the ruins of the prehistoric lake dwellers of Wagner and Robenhausen in Switzerland.

Another "Origin of Dixie."

Before the Civil war the old Citizens' bank of New Orleans, having the power to issue paper money, provided quantities of bills, most of ten-dollar denomination, having the French word "Dix" on their backs. This money became popular, according to this theory, Louisiana was referred to as the land of the "Dixies." Eventually the term was broadened to include all of the southern states.

HEARING SET FOR FRIDAY

Before K. M. Landis of the federal court will pass on the proposition of the trucks and beer which have been seized by the officials at Zion City he insists upon knowing the ownership of the beer and to whom it was consigned, this development occurred in the federal court in Chicago Wednesday.

Judge Landis issued subpoenas for Milwaukee brewers, for their agents in Kenosha, for the drivers and for the books. All are to be present in federal court Friday at which time it is expected there will be a full hearing in the case.

The court did not indicate how he felt with regard to the proposition, his only desire at this time, apparently being to establish the ownership of the beer. Once this is established he is ready to proceed with other details in the case.

Attorney E. V. Orvis, representing the truck drivers, Atty. A. V. Smith, representing the attorney general, and States Attorney J. G. Welch were present at the hearing Wednesday.

The subpoenas are returnable Friday. The companies for whose officials subpoenas were ordered are:

- Val Blatz Brewing company.
- Pabst Brewing company.
- Miller High Life Brewing company.
- All are Milwaukee concerns. The distributing concern involved is the Seider-Prim Bros. of Kenosha.

The charge is that the beer was shipped by rail from Milwaukee to the Seider-Prim Brothers and turned over by them to the beer runners, who would have taken it to Chicago if Constable Earl Casperson of Zion had not interfered.

The wholesale order for subpoenas was precipitated by a request from Charles Middlekauff, assistant to the attorney general of Illinois, that the fleet of trucks now held in a federal receivership under an order from Federal Judge Sanborn to be returned to the state to be disposed of under the search and seizure act.

Judge Landis began asking questions. Who was the receiver? Where were the trucks? Who did they belong to? What kind of beer were they hauling? Who was the beer going to? Why hadn't something been done about it before?

The representatives of the beer interests and of the state did their best, but Judge Landis was too fast for them. Finally he burst forth in characteristic style with an order to Jose Sullivan, clerk of the court:

"Get me subpoenas for all these people," he said, "and make them returnable Friday. Then we can put this thing into court, and maybe sift some sense out of it. In the meantime the trucks can stay where they are."

E. V. Orvis, a Waukegan attorney, contended that the seizing of the beer by the Zion police was a violation of the Interstate Commerce act, and was therefore unconstitutional.

"There is a certain element that only has use for the Constitution when it gets them into trouble," replied Judge Landis. "I want subpoenas for all the truck drivers, owners of the beer, and owners of the trucks, and I want them all to appear before me at 10 o'clock on Friday morning."

He also notified the attorneys for defendants that he wanted the trucks kept in the jurisdiction of the court.

Kerr-Weber Wedding Wednesday, Sept. 10

(From our Lake Villa Correspondent)

Last Wednesday at the M. E. church here, at two o'clock, the marriage of Miss Helen, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kerr and William M. Weber, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Weber of Sand Lake was solemnized in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. While the bride party was assembling Mrs. A. Hussey played a violin solo accompanied by Mrs. R. A. Douglas at the piano and with Mrs. Douglas accompaniment. The bride party entered to the strains of the Bridal chorus from Lohengrin and took their places on the platform which was profusely decorated with flowers, predominating colors being pink and white. First came Rev. Snyder, then the groom and his attendant Mr. Wagner, the ushers Oliver Wilton and Mr. Schraeder, followed by the bridesmaids, Misses Edythe Kerr and Mabel Falch and Miss Ruth Pollock of Antioch, who was maid of honor. Little Miss Ruth Snyder was flower girl, then came the bride on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The ring ceremony was used by Rev. Snyder and it was a beautiful wedding. The bride was very lovely in a gown of white net and veil and carried a shower bouquet of brides roses. After the ceremony, Mrs. Douglas played Mendelssohn's wedding march while the bride party filed out and went to the Kerr home where a reception was held. Late in the afternoon, the newly wedded couple started on an auto trip through the east, intending to visit all the principal cities and visit relatives, to be gone about a month, after which they will be at home to their friends at the Weber home at Sand Lake. The wedding gifts were many and beautiful including silver, cut glass, china and linen. They have a host of friends who wish them good luck and prosperity in their wedded life. This is the fourth wedding to take place in the Kerr family since February when Edgar, the older son was married.

Robert Kelly Dies at Home of Brother

Last Friday morning occurred the death of Mr. Robert Kelly at the home of his brother William Kelly at this place. Mr. Kelly, who has lived in the city of Chicago for many years, had been ill for the past years and several weeks ago came to the home of his brother here in order that they might care for him in his last days.

The deceased was born in the Isle of Mann January 20, 1850, and came to this country while still a young man. He is survived by three brothers, James of the Isle of Mann, Charles and William of Antioch and one sister Mrs. Bower of Clinton, Iowa.

The funeral services were held at St. Ignatius church Monday afternoon with Rev. Kolbeck in charge. The remains were laid to rest in the Antioch Hillside cemetery.

Hand it to Eddie Camp, of Racine, as the champion fisherman of Brown's lake for the season of 1919. While fishing last Sunday he landed a black bass that weighed six and three-quarter pounds, and it is probably the largest bass caught in Brown's lake this summer. The bass measured 22 inches in length and 13 inches around his body. Ye fisherman! Just think of landing a beauty like that.

When George F. Langley quit work at the J. L. Williams farm south of Lake Geneva, two weeks ago, he announced his intention of going to Chicago to consult a medical specialist. Last Friday Langley returned to that city in the custody of Officer E. D. Button, following a brief vacation at Libertyville, Ill., charged with forging his former employer's name to a $20 check drawn on the Farmers' National bank.

A fishing party in charge of Bob Edwards, guide at the Lake Lawn hotel at Delavan Lake, had the time of their lives Sunday when one of the members hooked a 21 pound pickerel. The entire crew labored for 25 minutes to land the big boy, but the fish was not pulled in until after it had been shot twice. When the fish was finally opened a mud hen was discovered in its stomach. The pickerel is one of the largest if not the best landed at the resort this year.

GREEN FANCY

His uneasiness increased to consternation when he discovered that Sprouse had not yet put in an appearance. What had become of the man? He could not help feeling, however, that somehow the little agent would suddenly pop out of the chimney in his room, or sneak in through a crack under the door—and laugh at his fears.

Shortly before the noon hour, Peter Ames halted the old automobile from Green Fancy in front of the Tavern and out stepped O'Dowd, followed by no less a personage than the pseudo Mr. Loeb. There were a number of traveling bags in the tonneau of the car.

Catching sight of Barnes, the Irishman shouted a genial greeting.

"The top of the morning to ye. You remember Mr. Loeb, don't you? Mr. Curtis' secretary. Mr. Loeb is leaving us for a few days on business. Good morning, Mr. Boneface," he called out to Putnam Jones who approached at that juncture. "We are sadly in want of gasoline."

Barnes caught the look that the Irishman shot at him out of the corner of his eye.

"Perhaps you'd better see that the scoundrels don't give us short measure, Mr. Loeb," said O'Dowd. Loeb hesitated for a second, and then, evidently in obedience to a command from the speaker's eye, moved off to where Peter was opening the intake.

O'Dowd lowered his voice. "Barnes, I let you off last night, and I let her off as well. In return, I ask you to hold your tongue until the man down there gets a fair start. A day's start and—"

"Are you in danger, too, O'Dowd?"

"To be sure—but I love it. I can always squirm out of tight places."

"I would not deliberately put you in jeopardy, O'Dowd."

"See here, I am going back to that house up yonder. There is still work for me there. What I'm after now is to get him on the train at Hornville. I'll be here again at four o'clock, on my word of honor. Trust me, Barnes."

"Do you mean to say that you are coming back here to run the risk of being—"

"We've had word that the government has men on the way. Why, hang it all, Barnes, don't you know who it was that engineered that whole business last night?"

Barnes smiled. "I do. He is a secret agent from the embassy."

"Secret granny! I almost shouted O'Dowd. 'He is the slickest, cleverest crook that ever drew the breath of life. And he's got away with the jewels, for which you can whistle in vain, I'm thinking.'"

"For heaven's sake, O'Dowd," began Barnes, his blood like ice in his veins.

"But don't take my word for it. Ask her—upstairs there, God bless her!—ask her if she knows Chester fore. In the name of God, Barnes, how did you happen to fall in with the villain?"

Barnes passed his hand over his brow, dazed. "He—he represented himself as a book agent," he mumbled, striving to collect himself. "Jones knew him. Said he had been around here for weeks. I—"

"That's the man," said O'Dowd, scowling. "He trotted all over the county, selling books. For the love of it, do ye think? Not much. He had other fish to fry, you may be sure. Barnes, if we ever lay hands on that friend of yours—well, he won't have to fry in hell. He'll be burnt alive. Thank God, my mind's at rest on one score. She didn't skip out with him. They all think he did. Not one of them suspects that she came away with you. There is plenty of evidence that she let him in through her window."

"All ready, O'Dowd," called Loeb.

"Come along, please."

"Coming," said the Irishman. "Don't blame yourself, old man. See you later, Barnes. So long!"

CHAPTER XVI.

The First Wayfarer Visits a Shrine, Confesses, and Takes an Oath.

How was he to find the courage to impart the appalling news to her? He was now convinced beyond all doubt that the so-called Sprouse had made off with the priceless treasure and that only a miracle could bring about its recovery. He realized to what extent he had been shaped into a tool to be used by the master craftsman. He saw through the whole Machiavellian scheme, and he was also now morally certain that Sprouse would have sacrificed him without the slightest hesitation.

In the event that anything went wrong with their enterprise, the man would have shot him dead and earned the gratitude and commendation of his associates! He would have been glorified and not crucified by his friends.

With a heavy heart he mounted the stairs. At the top he paused to deliberate. Would it not be better to keep her in ignorance? What was to be gained by revealing to her—But Miss Thackeray was luring him on to destruction. She stood outside the door and beckoned. Then she closed the door from the outside, and Barnes was alone with the cousin of kings and queens and princes.

"I feared you had deserted me," she said, holding out her hand to him as he strode across the room.

"I saw no occasion to disturb your rest," he mumbled.

"I have been peeping," she said, looking at him searchingly. "Where is Mr. Loeb going, Mr. Barnes?"

"O'Dowd says he is to be gone for a few days on business," he equivocated.

"He will not return," she said quietly. "He is a coward at heart. Oh, I know him well," she went on, scorn in her voice.

"Was I wrong in not trying to stop him?" he asked.

She pondered this for a moment. "No," she said, but he caught the dubious note in her voice. "It is just as well, perhaps, that he should disappear. His flight today spares—but we are more interested in the man Sprouse. Has he returned?"

"No, Miss Cameron," said he ruefully. "And then, without a single reservation, he laid bare the story of Sprouse's defection. When he inquired if she had heard of the man known as Chester Natsmith, she confirmed his worst fear by describing him as the guard who watched beneath her window. He was known to her as a thief of international fame."

"You were no match for Chester Natsmith. Do not look so glum. The shrewdest police officers in Europe have never been able to cope with him. Why should you despair?"

He sprang to his feet. "By gad, he hasn't got away with it yet," he grated. "I will run this scoundrel down if I have to devote the remainder of my life to the task."

She sighed. "Alas, I fear that I shall have to tell you a little more about this wonderful man you know as Sprouse. Six months ago the friends and supporters of the legitimate successor to my country's throne consummated a plan whereby the crown jewels and certain documents of state were surreptitiously removed from the palace vaults. Instead of depositing the treasure in Paris, it was sent to this country in charge of a group of men whose fealty could not be questioned. The man you know as Loeb is in reality my cousin. I have known him all my life. He is the youngest brother of the pretender to the throne, and a cousin of the prince who is held prisoner by the Austrians. This prince has a brother also, and it was to him that I was supposed to deliver the jewels. I traveled from New York, but not alone as you may suspect. I was carefully protected from the time I left my hotel there until well, until I arrived in Boston."

"While there I received a secret message from friends in Canada directing me to go to Spanish Falls, where I would be met and conducted by Prince Sebastian himself to the place called Green Fancy, which was near the Canadian border. A safe escort would be provided for us, and we would be on British soil within a few hours after our meeting. It is only necessary to add that when I arrived at Green Fancy I met Prince Ugo—and understood! I had carefully covered my tracks after leaving Boston. My real friends were, and still are, completely in the dark as to my movements, so skillfully was the trick managed."

"And now for Chester Natsmith. It was he who, acting for the misguided loyalists and recommended by certain young aristocrats who by virtue of their own dissipation had come to know him as a man of infinite resourcefulness and daring, planned and carried out the pillaging of the palace vaults. Almost under the noses of the foreign guards he succeeded in obtaining the jewels. No doubt he could have made off with them at that time, but he shrewdly preferred to have them brought to America by some one else. It would have been impossible for him to dispose of them in Europe. You see how cunning he is?"

"He was no doubt thwarted in his design to waylay me on the road from Spanish Falls by a singular occurrence in this tavern. He was attacked in his room here, overpowered, bound and gagged by two men. He knew the men. They were thieves as clever and as merciless as himself. They too were watching for me. I do not know how these men learned of my intention to come to Green Fancy."

"They came to the Tavern four or five days before your arrival at Green Fancy," Barnes interrupted.

"Sprouse told me that they were secret service men from abroad and that he was working with them. My theory is this, and I think it is justified by events: The men were really secret agents, sent here to watch the movements of the gang up there. They came upon Sprouse and recognized him. On the day mentioned they overpowered him and forced him to reveal certain facts connected with affairs at Green Fancy. Possibly he led them to believe that you were one of the conspirators. They waited for your arrival and then risked the hazardous trip to Green Fancy. They were discovered and shot."

"I believe you are right," she cried.

"Then we have accounted for Mr. Sprouse, and I am no longer interested in the unraveling of the mystery surrounding the deaths of Roon and Paul," said Barnes. "There is nothing to keep me here any longer, Miss Cameron. I suggest that you allow me to escort you at once to your friends, wherever they are."

She was opposed to this plan. While there was still a chance that Sprouse might be apprehended in the neighborhood, or the possibility of his being caught by the relentless pursuers, she declined to leave.

"Then, I shall also stay," said he promptly, and was repaid by the tremulous smile she gave him. He was helplessly in love with this beautiful cousin of kings and queens. And when he thought of kings and queens he realized that beyond all question his love was hopeless.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Second Wayfarer Is Transformed.

O'Dowd returned late in the afternoon. He was in a hurry to get back to Green Fancy; there was no mistaking his uneasiness.

"For the love of heaven, Barnes, get her away from here as soon as possible, and do it as secretly as you can," he said. "I may as well tell you that she is in more danger from the government secret service than from anyone up yonder."

"She may prefer to face the music, O'Dowd. If I know her at all, she will refuse to run away."

"Then ye'll have to kidnap her," said the Irishman earnestly. "There will be men swarming here from both sides of the border by tomorrow night or next day. It's the gospel truth, and it's going to be bad for all of us if we're here when they come."

"Who is she, O'Dowd? Man to man, tell me the truth. I want to know just where I stand."

O'Dowd hesitated, looked around the taproom, and then leaned across the table.

"Miss Cameron is in reality the Countess Therese Mara-Danfanda—famously and lovingly known in her own land as the Countess Ted. She was visiting in this country when the war broke out. If it is of any use to you, I'll add that she would be rich if Aladdin could only come to life and restore the splendors of the demolished castle, refill the chests of gold that have been emptied by the conquerors, and restock the farms that have been pillaged and devastated. In the absence of Aladdin, however, she is almost as poor as the ancient church mouse. So there you are, me man. Half the royal progeny of Europe have been suitors for her hand, and the other half would be if they didn't happen to be of the same sex. Good-by. I must be on my way." He arose and held out his hand. "Good-by and good luck forever."

"You are a brick, O'Dowd. I want to see you again. You will always find me—"

"Thanks. Don't issue any rash invitations. I might take you up."

Barnes started upstairs as soon as O'Dowd was off, urged by an eagerness that put wings on his feet and a thrill of excitement in his blood. Half-way up he stopped short. A new condition confronted him. What was the proper way to approach a person of royal blood? He would have to think. Pausing at her door, he was at once aware of voices inside the room.

He rapped on the door, but so timorously that nothing came of it. His second effort was productive. He heard Miss Thackeray say "good gracious," and, after a moment, Miss Cameron's subdued: "What is it?"

"May I come in?" he inquired, rather ashamed of his vigor. "It's only Barnes."

"Come in," was her lively response.

"It was awfully good of you, Miss Thackeray, to let me hear your lines. I think you will be a great success in the part."

"Thanks," said Miss Thackeray dryly. "I'll come in again and let you hear me in the third act." She went out, mumbling her lines as she passed Barnes without seeing him.

"I hope you will feel able to leave this place tomorrow, countess. We must get away almost immediately."

"Ah, you have been listening to O'Dowd, I see."

"Yes. He tells me it will be dangerous to—"

"He is right. It would be difficult for me to clear myself. No one would believe that I did not deliberately make off with the jewels. They would say that I—oh, it is too dreadful!"

"Don't worry about that," he exclaimed. "You have me to testify that—"

"How little you know of intrigue," she cried. "They would laugh at you and say that you were merely another fool who had lost his head over a woman. They would say that I duped you—"

"No!" he cried vehemently. "Your people know better than you think. You are disheartened, discouraged. Things will look brighter tomorrow."

"I don't know what I should do without you," she said.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Mr. Sprouse Continues to Be Perplexed, but Puts His Nose to the Ground.

Barnes was abroad early. He was at breakfast when Peter Ames called up. An inspiration mentioned the wholesale exodus: he hired Peter forthwith and ordered him to report immediately—with the car. He was going up to Green Fancy for Miss Cameron's wardrobe.

Two minutes after Peter drove up to the Tavern he was on the way back to Green Fancy again, and seated beside him was Thomas Kingsbury Barnes, his new master.

There was not a sign of human life about the place. Peter accompanied him upstairs to the room recently occupied by Miss Cameron.

They found two small leather trunks, thickly belabeled, in the room upstairs. Both were locked.

OLD AGE STARTS WITH YOUR KIDNEYS

Science says that old age begins with weakened kidneys and digestive organs. This being true, it is easy to believe that by keeping the kidneys and digestive organs cleansed and in proper working order old age can be deferred and life prolonged far beyond that enjoyed by the average person.

For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil has been relieving the weaknesses and disability due to advanced age. It is a standard old-time home remedy and needs no introduction. GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil is inclosed in odorless, tasteless capsules containing about 5 drops each. Take them as you would a pill, with a swallow of water. The oil stimulates the kidney action and enables the organs to throw off the poisons which cause premature old age. New life and strength increase as you continue the treatment. When completely restored continue taking a capsule or two each day. GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil Capsules will keep you in health and vigor and prevent a return of the disease.

Do not wait until old age or disease have settled down for good. At the first sign that your kidneys are not working properly, go to your druggist and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil Capsules. Money refunded if they do not help you. Three sizes. But remember to ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. In sealed packages.

AIMING ABOUT LONG ENOUGH

Old Gentleman Evidently Thought Prospective Son-in-Law Should Be Getting Ready to Fire.

John Bewins was the most bashful lad in a Wessex village. For three years he had been keeping company with Lottie Reed, but he could not bring his courage up to the popping point. On Sunday night as he was leaving the garden gate of his inamorata, he encountered the old man, who had begun to chafe under the diffidence of his daughter's sweet-heart.

"Look 'ee here, John!" exclaimed paterfamilias, "you have been coming to see my daughter for several years now, and I want to know what your intentions are?"

"W-w-well, a-s-sir," stammered John, "I am aiming to-to m-marry her."

"Aiming?" snorted the old man. "Well, don't you think it old time that you fired?"—London Tit-Bits.

INSPIRATION AT ODD TIMES

How Longfellow Wrote "Wreck of the Hesperus"—Rossini Composed Music in Bed.

Longfellow's "Wreck of the Hesperus" came to him as he was sitting by his fireside, the night after a violent storm. He went to bed, but could not sleep; the Hesperus would not be denied; and as he lay the verses flowed on without let or hindrance until the poem was completed.

One at least of Rossini's splendid pieces of music was composed in bed. It was when he was young, poor and unknown, and lived in wretched quarters. After writing a duet the composer allowed his manuscripts to slip off the sheets and fall under the bed, and moreover he believed it would be unlucky to pick the sheets up; so he and crashed through one of the physician's disgust he could not remember it. It was therefore necessary to write a new one. This he had finished when a friend entered.

"Try that," said the composer, "and tell me what you think of it." The verdict was favorable.

"Now," said Rossini, "look under the bed. You'll find another duet there. Try that, too."

The friend did so, and declared the original composition was much the better. It is included in his works today.

An Obsession.

The favorite American sport just now appears to be boosting prices. The prices advance while you sleep, and in the morning you are quite likely to find a new schedule awaiting you—with a uniform increase all along the line.

At least, that's what a Cleveland man believes, and he points in proof to a certain conversation he claims to have overheard recently in a downtown store. Here it is:

Clerk (to proprietor)—Isn't it about time for us to mark down our shelf-worn straw hats?

Proprietor (in horror)—Mark 'em down! You mean mark 'em up.

Unfortunate Arras.

Arras, on the River Scarpe, was the capital of the Gallic tribe of Atrebatians in the time of Caesar. Later the capital of Artois, Arras is now the chief city of the department of Pas-de-Calais. Since the fourth century Arras has been famed for its woolen cloth, and particularly for the tapestry hangings.

Arras was invaded in 1014, when her grand palace and petit palace were destroyed by bombs. The great cathedral was absolutely shattered, as well as the railway station. Not one house was left intact. Just one of the former inhabitants, an old woman, was left there. Although it teemed with military life, beautiful Arras became a corpse—a dead city.

BOCHE SKIPPER'S POOR SPELLING HIS UNDOING

Exciting Incident in the Life of a Raider Patrol of British Navy.

SINKING OF THE TURRITELLA

Germans Nearly Fooled the English but Were Betrayed When They Spelled Aden With a "T"—Destroyed the Vessel Themselves.

London.—Little by little the world is learning some of the romance and excitement that at times punctuated the rather prosaic lives of the men who patrolled the seas and kept the ocean traffic lanes open for allied shipping. The dangers that lurked in the Arabian seas and Indian ocean have been known in a general way from the too frequent admiralty reports of ships sunk there by submarines and raiders. An episode in the life of a raider patrol is told by a correspondent of the London Times, as follows:

At the beginning of March, 1917, I was in H. M. S. — on the Aden patrol—a dull job, as all patrolling jobs are. But we did not pretend to be plating for the more thrilling occupation of searching for the German raider Wolf. Her guns could outrange the guns of our little ship, so effectually, that had we met her, we should probably have been blown out of the sea before we could put a shot anywhere near her, and, frankly, we had no great desire to meet her.

About 10 o'clock one evening a signalman appeared at the wardroom door with a message from the bridge, "From the officer of the watch, sir. Ship on the starboard bow showing no lights."

"Probably an old tramp scared out of his wits by these yarns about the Wolf," suggested someone.

"All these merchantmen are going about without lights nowadays."

The captain and the navigator went up to the bridge, where they were presently joined by the first lieutenant. The moon was nearly full, casting a white truck across the dark blue carpet of the sea. It was the kind of night that brings back memories of a Thames regatta, of lounging in a well-cushioned punt, and listening to a good band. To connect such a night with German raiders, guns, mines and torpedoes was quite impossible; the whole setting was entirely wrong.

The mysterious ship was now two points on our port bow, and about three miles ahead. A thick volume of smoke pouring from her funnel suggested that she was in a hurry, or, at all events, was not disposed to be sociable with us. We had been ambulating along comfortably at eight knots; the order was given to increase to ten. The shutter of our signal lamp began to rattle.

"What ship is that?"

Claimed British Registry.

The signalman had to repeat the question twice before he evoked an answer.

"Turrutella," was the belated reply.

"What nationality?" we asked promptly.

"British," was the answer.

"What are your signal letters?" was our next question.

"J. F. K. L.," came the answer.

We hunted up the name in Lloyd's list, but without success.

"Are you sure you have got his name right, signalman? Ask him again."

"What is your name?" asked the patient signalman. This time the mysterious stranger expanded volubly.

"Turrutella, London. Runs for British admiralty. Port Said for orders."

"Turrutella, London. Runs for British admiralty. Port Said for orders."

What manner of ship was this, who spelled her name at one time with an

O and one R, and at another time with a U and two R's? And that expression, "Runs for British admiralty." Would an English merchant skipper talk about the British admiralty. Would he not say, "Under admiralty charter," or some such phrase? The signal lamp of the unknown vessel began to scintillate again.

"Who are you?" ran the simple message.

There was certainly a directness about the question suggesting a bluff old English skipper.

"A British man-of-war," was our answer. A little later we followed it up by a peremptory order to the stranger to stop. When the signal lamp began to flicker again, it seemed to show just a trifle of hesitation.

Night of Suspense.

His meaning was plain enough. We could have ordered him to stop when we first sighted him, when we were within range of the shore batteries, and where there were British men-of-war lying just round the corner inside the harbor. He evidently suspected us of being the German raider. All these merchantmen were in a state of high nervous tension. The mere fact of being ordered to stop was enough to make him run as hard as he could. It was clear that we could not overhaul him. The only question was, had we sufficient grounds of suspicion to justify us in taking steps to compel him to stop? No one cares to go to the length of firing on a strange merchantman in the middle of the night unless there are grave reasons for doing so. And if this fellow was not a British merchantman, as he professed, what else could he be? He might be the Wolf? It was at least a possibility. In that case the prospect of an engagement opened up visions of a glorious death, but little else.

Wireless messages were sent to the other ships of the patrol, stating the circumstances, and the position, course and speed. The first watch was over. The officer who had been relieved had dropped into the wardroom for a cigarette before turning in. As he lighted up he remarked: "I should like to get hold of that old merchant skipper and give him a piece of my mind."

"The question," observed one of the pensive members of the mess, "is whether he would understand your language. They are not all good linguists."

It was an observation which clearly needed amplifying.

"If you were an English skipper under the impression that you were being chased by a German raider, would you expect him to go on chasing you for two hours without firing?"

The officer just relieved from the bridge became meditative.

Spelled Aden with a "T."

"There was something funny," he said, "even about that last signal asking us why we did not stop him at Aden. The signalman tells me that he first spelled Aden with a 't' and then corrected it."

Even the technicalities of a flag-wagger may be fraught with importance. When a messenger came down from the bridge to say that the ship on the port bow seemed to be drawing away from us, the captain sent back a message to the officer of the watch to put on the best speed he could. The little ship began to throb with her exertions, while her funnel grew red-hot.

Just before the morning watch the moon went down, and darkness fell upon the face of the water. It was evident that we had gained very little, if at all, on the stranger. The captain, leaning over the bridge rail, sang out for the signalman.

"Make 'if you do not stop I shall fire.'"

"Ay, ay, sir."

"If-you-do-not-stop-I-shall-fire."

The signalman closed his shutter on the final word with a snap. There followed a few minutes of suspense. Then came the answer.

"I am stopping now."

"Number One, tell them to stand by the searchlight," said the captain to the first lieutenant. "Signalman, tell him to place his navigation lights."

Very promptly in response to the signal the lights appeared upon the strange ship.

"Now make, 'Remain where you are. I will board you at daylight.'"

What the Searchlight Revealed.

When the distance between the ships had been reduced to about a mile the order was given to switch on the searchlight. The great white streak shot across the sea until it settled on the mysterious craft. In large letters across her stern ran the legend, "Turrutella, London."

"I believe I have been fooled after all," said the captain to himself. The searchlight also revealed a party showing off in a boat, presumably containing theirate skipper, wanting to know what the blank blank all this business meant, for in the eastern waters they were not accustomed to it. Presently there came a strange voice through a megaphone from the stranger's bridge:

"Switch off that damned searchlight."

"He seems to be getting a bit ratty. Shall I switch off?"

The order was given, and darkness prevailed once more. Some minutes later the eastern sky began to glow, feebly at first, casting a kind of half light over the face of the sea—a mere glimmer in which objects appeared without shape. Out of this gloom there arose such a babel of sound as brought us all to the ship's side. Dimly we could discern two boats, one on the port and one on the starboard side of us, both crowded with occupants, who were jabbering in some strange tongue like a lot of excited monkeys.

Germans Sank Their Own Ship.

Just as we came abreast of the strange ship we saw a cloud of smoke shoot up from her, which was followed by the heavy thud of an explosion. Next moment there came another heavy thud, and we saw that the Turrutella was beginning to sink by the head. We stemmed past her and began to circle round her at a respectful distance, for ships which carry explosives may carry them in the form of torpedoes. Gradually the eastern sky began to flush red; the hue was reflected by the sea, until one could have fancied that the stricken ship was staining the waters with her blood. And then we saw a third boat rowing away from the wreck in the direction of the other two. We swung round to return and pick them up.

As we approached the first two boats we realized why we had failed to understand the language. They were full of Chinamen all talking at once, in a state of hysterical agitation. We waited eagerly for the third boat. As it drew up alongside one gangway two officers stepped briskly up the ladder, and were followed by twenty-six men, each wearing a round blue cap with two black ribbons falling down behind. Across the front of the cap ribbon was printed in gold letters "Kaiserliche Marine." We had not been fooled after all.

The Turrutella's Story.

The story of the Turrutella is briefly this. She had been captured from the Germans early in the war. In February, 1917, she set out from Shanghai with a Chinese crew and British officers; she put into Rangoon to pick up cargo, and again into Colombo, where she spent some days loading up. She left Colombo on Feb. 23, 1917, and four days later walked straight into the jaws of the Wolf. Her British officers and men were taken aboard the raider as prisoners, but the Chinamen remained in her. A German prize crew then took possession of her; she was loaded up with mines, and sent off to Aden to lay her eggs just outside the harbor. Her subsequent movements had all been carefully planned to fit in with the program revealed by the ship's papers. On March 6 she was due in Prija, where she intended to call, looking as innocent as a lamb, with her Chinese crew on the upper deck and her German ratings stowed below. Thence she was to proceed to the Red sea to lay more mines, and afterward to rejoin the Wolf at a rendezvous.

Could she have carried out this program if she had not happened to fall in with us? There was at least a sporting chance. Her second officer spoke English as fluently as his own language, and without any trace of an accent. He had spent eight years in our merchant service, and had the manners and bearing of an English officer. But the weak spot in the company was evidently the signalman. That signal "Why did you not stop me when I was passing Aden?" was brilliant. It showed real genius. But the signalman completely ruined it by spelling Aden with a "t."

News From America Seemed to Prove Irishman Had Not Misjudged His Capacity.

Pat Finnegan had left his wife in Ireland and gone to America to try his fortune and establish a home for his family in the new world. It was some two or three weeks after Pat's departure that his wife stood in the meager garden in front of her home, looking down the road her man had gone, and moodily speculating on his success. She was rudely startled by the harsh voice of Mrs. O'Leary calling her over the fence.

"Have you heard the news from America, Mrs. Finnegan?"

"Faith, an' Ol have not."

"It is in the paper this mornin'. Read it fer yerself. 'America gone dry. Last alcoholic drink sold at midnight, June 20.'"

Mrs. Finnegan looked doubtful for a minute; then, swelling with pride and casting a triumphant glance at Mrs. O'Leary, she shouted back: "Faith, an' Pat always said, give him two weeks an' there was not a country in the world he couldn't drink dry!"—Life.

Experts or Theorists—Which?

The packing industry is intricate, complex—far more so than the railroads or the telegraph.

Every day multiplying needs of society increase its problems and multiplying responsibilities demand more of it.

Highly trained, experts, specialists of years' experience, thinkers and creative men, devote their lives, their energies, their activities, to solving the problems of the packing industry and meeting its widening duties.

Swift & Company is not a few dozen packing plants, a few hundred branch houses, a few thousand refrigerator cars, and a few million dollars of capital, but an organization of such men. It is the experience, intelligence, initiative and activity which operates this physical equipment.

Can this intelligence, this experience, this initiative and creative effort which handles this business at a profit of only a fraction of a cent per pound from all sources, be fostered through the intervention of political theorists, however pure their purposes? Or be replaced by legislation? Does Congress really think that it can?

Effect of the Circus.
After all, civilization is sometimes a bore. The circus carries us back to the freedom of the great beginning. Wherefore, even psychologists forget their trades in such days and became for the moment grown-up children like the rest of us, responsive to the wild blood of their remote progenitors.—Baltimore Sun.

Advantage of Travel.
Travel is a great educator and we noticed in the conversation at luncheon yesterday that a little dab of warmed-over codfish, placed out with one egg to make it somewhere near enough, had become casserolette of Newfoundland cod aux oeufs.—Ohio State Journal.

BOSTON POLICE FIGHT TO FINISH

Chief Refuses to Let Any Striker Go Back to Work on the Force.

7,000 SOLDIERS PATROL CITY

Machine Guns in Place Ready to Quell Fresh Outbreaks—Doubt General Strike—Loyal Policemen Are to Train New Men.

Boston, Sept. 16.—Defiance met defiance in the policemen's strike. "We will remain undaunted in our struggle for recognition of our union," was the strikers' response to the announcement of Police Commissioner Curtis that those of the men who "deserted their posts of duty" would be reinstated, and that he would proceed to build up a new police force.

The strikers' announcement was made by John F. McNelis, president of the union. McNelis was one of the 19 members of the union who were tried before the commissioner, found guilty, and suspended from the force, and whose sentence to dismissal was announced by the commissioner. He said:

"The policemen are not wavering in the face of false reports of the moneyed interests now so forcibly trying to deprive us of our American freedom."

"In the home and the hearts of the police we will remain undaunted in our struggle for recognition of our union and the right to be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor."

Because of his dismissal from the force, McNelis offered to resign as president of the union. The members thereupon re-elected him, as well as other officers affected by the dismissal order.

With 7,000 troops patrolling the principal streets and squads of newly recruited police quartered in every station, city officials said they had the situation well in hand.

The authorities, however, were prepared for eventualities. Machine guns were in readiness for instant action and one gun was sent to the Roxbury section, where gangs were reported forming.

Police Commissioner Curtis was going ahead with plans for the organization of a new police force. The firemen have postponed their scheduled organization vote on a walkout. There was little talk of a general sympathetic strike, but it was still uncertain what action officials of the Central Labor union and the policemen's union would take as a result of the policemen having lost their jobs. Loyal police were promoted in many cases and will train new men in their duties.

U. S. FLAG ON 25 HUN SHIPS

Great Britain Has Only Six of More Than 10,000 Tons, Says Lloyd's.

London, Sept. 16.—The new volumes of Lloyd's Register contain information with respect to 43 former German liners of upwards of 10,000 tons gross. These vessels are distributed permanently or otherwise in the following way:

United States—shipping board, 16; United States navy department, 9; British shipping controller, 6; Italy, 2; Brazil, 1; unallotted, 9; total, 43. Thus far of 43 former German liners of more than 10,000 tons the American flag floats over 25 and the British flag six.

TREATY PUT UP TO U. S. SENATE

Report on Peace Document Given Law Makers Says It Will Breed Wars.

PROVIDES 45 AMENDMENTS

Reservations Give Unconditional Right to Withdraw From League and Give U. S. Exclusive Right to Decide Own Domestic Questions.

Washington, Sept. 13.—Rejection of the German peace treaty with its League of Nations covenant or adoption of amendments would mean sacrifice by the United States of all concessions obtained from Germany under a dictated peace, minority members of the foreign relations committee declared in a report presented to the senate.

The report presented by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking Democratic member of the committee, urged speedy ratification of the treaty without amendments or reservations. It deplored "the long and unnecessary delay to which the treaty had been subjected, while locked up in the committee whose recommendations were from the start a foregone conclusion," and asserted these recommendations could have been made in July.

Washington, Sept. 12.—Characterized as an alliance and not a league, which "will breed wars instead of securing peace," the German peace treaty, including the covenant for a League of Nations, was formally reported to the senate by the foreign relations committee with forty-five amendments and four reservations.

It will be the first great document of its kind to be discussed in the open—without the confines of "executive session."

Accompanying the treaty was the majority report of the foreign relations committee, subscribed to by every Republican member except Senator McCumber of North Dakota, ex-attorney general, who declared the treaty "governed by a single purpose and that is to guard American rights and sovereignty, the invasion of which would stimulate branches of faith, encourage conflicts and generate wars."

The reservations proposed:

1. Unconditional right to withdraw from the league.
2. Declaration by the United States to accept any of the legal or moral obligations of the much-discussed article X, or to accept any mandatory from the league "except by action of the congress of the United States."
3. Reserving to the United States the exclusive right to decide what questions are within its own domestic jurisdiction.

4. Absolute reservation of the Monroe doctrine to the judgment of the United States alone.

The principal amendments are proposed to provide:

Equal voting power for the United States with Great Britain in the assembly of the league.

Giving to China instead of Japan the province of Shantung.

Relief of the United States from having representatives on commissions deciding matters in which it has no concern.

Others concern phraseology.

The majority report says, are submitted "to preserve American independence and American sovereignty and thereby best serve the welfare of mankind."

Fears that other nations may not accept an amended covenant the report dismissed with the statement: "That is one thing that certainly will not happen. . . . The other nations will take us on our own terms for without us their league is a wreck, and all their gains from a victorious peace are imperiled."

German delegates, the report contends, could easily be brought to Paris, and as Germany is not a member of the league she need not be consulted about changes of the covenant.

At the outset the majority report deals at length with criticisms of delay and points out that whereas the peace conference took six months to agree on the treaty, the senate foreign relations committee had 47 working days. Demands for speed "in the most important subject that ever came before the senate of the United States," the report says, were "largely the work of the administration and its newspaper organs."

Former Empress Has Son.
Geneva, Sept. 9.—Former Empress Zita of Austria gave birth to a son at Prangins. Both mother and child are said to be doing well.

Poles to Aid the French.
Warsaw, Sept. 16.—A convention has been signed between the French and Polish governments by which 100,000 Polish workmen will be transported to France. The convention will relieve the unemployment problem here.

British Give Turks Scare.
London, Sept. 16.—British forces have been landed at Scutari, across the Bosphorus from Constantinople. It is officially explained, however, that this was an ordinary troop movement of only 1,200 men.

WE ALL FEEL THAT SCHOOL'S BEGUN

RAID ON SINN FEIN VOTE AGAINST TREATY

BRITISH TROOPS SEIZE PAPERS AND ARMS IN IRELAND.

Detective Is Killed During Fighting in Dublin—Soldiers Charge Mob With Bayonets.

Dublin, Sept. 15.—The Sinn Fein parliament has been suppressed. Detective Officer Hoey of the political division of police was shot dead in the center of the city.

The Irish parliament, or "Dail Eireann," as it was known in Gaelic, was formed in Dublin on January 21 by 25 members of the Sinn Fein party who had been elected to the British house of commons and who, in accordance with a resolution adopted by the society, refused to go to Westminster.

At the inaugural meeting the Dail Eireann adopted a declaration of independence for Ireland and demanded the evacuation of the island by the British garrisons.

The British government at first determined to adopt the policy of ignoring the "parliament" and the action taken in suppressing it is the first official action taken in its respect.

A strong force of soldiers searched the Sinn Fein headquarters in this city.

The search lasted two hours. It included even a personal search of visitors to the premises. The documents seized related to the loan of the Irish republic and to the correspondence upon which the report of the American delegates who visited Ireland was based.

An exhaustive search also was made of the private house of Count Plunkett and that of the Sinn Fein member of parliament, Michael Staines.

At Skibbereen, in the southwestern part of County Cork, armed police raided a newspaper office and also a number of private residences.

Two Sinn Fein members of the house of commons were detained in Dublin after the search here, while the houses of other Sinn Fein members of the commons are under visitation.

Londonderry, Sept. 15.—While the police were seizing arms in a house in Rossville street here a stone was thrown. The officer in command ordered the troops to fix bayonets. The crowd thereupon dispersed.

AUSTRIA SIGNS PEACE TREATY

American Representatives Second to Put Names on the Document—China Also Represented.

St. Germain, France, Sept. 11.—Georges Clemenceau, president of the peace conference; Chancellor Karl Renner, head of the Austrian peace delegation; the weather man and all the peace conference delegates were in the best of humor for the signing of the treaty with Austria.

Toumanian and Jugo-Slavia did not sign the peace treaty. They have been given until Saturday to signify their position.

There was no hostility of any kind evinced when Doctor Renner smilingly entered the small Stone Age hall. He nodded politely as he took his seat at the end of the U-shaped table about which the delegates were grouped.

Frank L. Polk, who succeeded Secretary Lansing as head of the United States delegation, signed after Doctor Renner and was followed by Henry White and General Bliss of the American delegation.

Gas Explosion Kills Autoist.
Harrisburg, Ill., Sept. 16.—Lighting of a cigarette just as a garage man finished filling the gasoline tank of his automobile caused an explosion that proved fatal to Roy Cass and caused injury to his three companions.

Monarchists in Plot.
Vienna, Sept. 16.—Many monarchist agents arrived recently from Switzerland and started a violent press campaign in behalf of ex-emperor Karl. The monarchist party in Austria is looking to Germany for support.

G. A. R. VETERANS FAVOR RESERVATIONS TO PACT.

Elect Col. James D. Bell as Commander in Chief and D. M. Hall Vice Commander.

Columbus, O., Sept. 13.—Resolutions opposing ratification by the United States of the peace treaty in its present form were adopted almost unanimously by delegates attending the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The resolutions were presented by Commander Ketcham of Indiana and were adopted after a debate lasting all morning.

The veterans declared their action was not political, but in accord with their policy of 100 per cent Americanism. They said they were opposed to engaging in any entangling alliances and were unwilling to sacrifice any degree of Americanism for the sake of the League of Nations.

Col. James D. Bell of Brooklyn was unanimously elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

D. M. Hall of Columbus was elected senior vice commander.

KOLCHAK'S ARMY IS LOST

Bolshevik Claim Capture of 45,000 Prisoners in Southern Russia—Admiral Claims Gains.

London, Sept. 13.—The remainder of Admiral Kolchak's southern army in the region of Akhtubinsk and Orsk has surrendered to the bolsheviks. It is claimed in a bolshevik wireless dispatch from Moscow. This raises the total of bolshevik captures from the Kolchak forces within a week to 45,000 men, it is declared.

Omsk, Sept. 13.—General headquarters of the Kolchak army announced that the offensive was being carried forward successfully along the whole Siberian front. The enemy is being driven back everywhere, with severe losses, the announcement says, and has been compelled to abandon prisoners and important booty.

FIRST LED BY GEN. PERSHING

Commander Rides at Head of Famous Division in New York Parade.

New York, Sept. 12.—With Pershing at their head and with the Cross of War twinkling on their storied banners, the First division of regulars marched down Fifth avenue. The column of three regiments of infantry was twined with the fourragers of France, symbol of gallantry, and on the breasts of hundreds of marchers were the gay ribbons betokening medals bestowed for heroism.

In the surging, swinging, rhythmic stream which poured down the avenue were 25,000 men, full panopied for battle—the flower of the American army, the peers of any soldiers in the world.

28 PERSONS DIE IN HURRICANE

Corpus Christi, Tex., Swept by Flood; One Town Is Wiped Out.

THOUSANDS ARE HOMELESS

Port Aransas, Where 600 Persons Lived, Is Destroyed—Communication Cut Off From Many of the Coast Towns.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 17.—Twenty-eight or more persons were killed by the hurricane in Corpus Christi, according to a message from ex-Mayor Roy Miller to headquarters of the southern department of the army at San Antonio and forwarded to the state adjutant here.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 17.—Gen. Joseph T. Dickman, commander of the southern department, ordered a relief train sent to Corpus Christi. The train will carry tents, coats, blankets, medical supplies and several thousand cases of foodstuffs.

The entire town of Port Aransas, where 600 persons lived, has been destroyed, but whether or not the inhabitants had taken shelter inland is not known.

A radio from the captain of a Mexican Line steamer to Galveston says that his vessel has gone ashore over the piling and that the town is "completely destroyed." His message said nothing about loss of life and it is presumed he knows nothing except what has befallen his own ship.

Corpus Christi is the hardest hit of any place from which definite reports have come. Twenty-eight are known to be dead there, 3,000 are homeless, $3,000,000 worth of property is destroyed, and water from six to twelve feet deep covers one of the finest residence sections along the North shore. Appeals have been sent out for food and bedding.

One report says martial law has been proclaimed, but this is taken to mean that only the military is helping to rescue the suffering and to preserve order.

White Point, not far from Corpus Christi, reports that three bodies have been washed ashore there, and that persons on rafts can be seen at sea.

Victoria, in the Brownsville district, is still cut off from this part of the state.

Reports from near the coast in the counties of Victoria, Matagorda and Calhoun are that summer houses have been razed and cotton crops destroyed, but no loss of life is definitely reported. At Kingsville the roundhouse of the Gulf Coast Lines has been destroyed, but no mention is made of fatalities.

The message coming from the division superintendent of the railroad at Kingsville, also confirms the report of deaths and destruction at Corpus Christi.

Roy Miller, former mayor of Corpus Christi and now president of the relief committee, has managed to get this message through to Houston:

"Please spread word that food supplies, coats, bedding and general supplies, should be rushed to Corpus Christi at once. Aid and relief necessary on account of storm. Damage is approximately $3,000,000. Twelve or fourteen known dead and great number homeless."

As in the great disaster at Galveston years ago, the damage in Corpus Christi and Port Aransas was due to the piling up of the gulf waters by a terrific gale from the east and by the violence of the gale itself.

The heavy gale and the rain combined to ruin crops and wreck buildings inland.

SENATE GETS THE TREATY

Consideration of the German Peace Pact Begins in the Upper House.

Two Fast Talkers.

Oklahoma produces two of the fastest talkers in the national house of representatives. The expert official stenographers of the lower body say that Representatives Scott and Ferris and Charley Carter—the latter with a trace of Indian blood in his veins—can spin out words faster than possibly anybody else in public life. Their diction and enunciation are good, however, and they are easier to report, stenographically, than a slow-talking speaker who gets his sentences all "balled up" and has not terminal facilities when he gets involved with nouns, adjectives, verbs and adverbs. The fellow who starts a sentence and never puts a verb in it is the pest of reporter experience.

Uncomfortable Consistency.

"Twenty-five dollars fine," said the justice of the peace. "Oh, now, see here, judge," said the culprit, "be consistent. I wasn't going a bit faster than I was last summer when I was hauled up and you acquitted me."

"All right," said the justice, "if you feel that way about it, we'll make it $50, covering both offenses."—Boston Transcript.

Back Given Out?

Housework is too hard for a woman who is half sick, nervous and always tired. But it keeps piling up, and gives weak kidneys no time to recover. If your back is lame and aching and your kidneys irregular, if you have "blue spells," sick headaches, nervousness, dizziness and rheumatic pains, use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have done wonders for thousands of worn out women.

An Illinois Case

Mrs. John Hicks, 321 E. Thirteenth St., Mt. Vernon, Ill., says: "I had a severe case of kidney trouble. I used to be so dizzy I would often topple over at my work. My head ached and pained all the time and there was a heavy, dragging feeling through my hips and loins. Headaches were a lot of trouble and my kidneys acted too often. I got Doan's Kidney Pills and used two boxes. They put my kidneys in a healthy condition and I was cured of the backaches and other suffering."

ACCIDENT CASTS PALL OVER TOUR OF PRESIDENT

Two of Wilson Party Are Killed
When Autos Collide in Oregon.

TWO OTHERS IN CAR ARE SEVERELY INJURED

One of the Victims Was Ben. F. Allen, a Well-Known Washington Newspaper Man—The Other Dead Man Was
James R. Patterson of Portland.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 10.—Driven at breakneck speed along the Columbia highway, 12 miles from here, an automobile bearing three of the Washington newspaper correspondents accompanying President Wilson's party left the road, turned turtle on an incline and left two dead and three injured men in its wake.

Ben. F. Allen, for 15 years the Washington correspondent of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, was instantly killed, as was James R. Patterson, seventy-three years old, the owner and driver of the car.

The injured were Robert T. Small, Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger; Stanley M. Reynolds, Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, and Arthur D. Sullivan, a reporter for the Portland News. Both Mr. Small and Mr. Reynolds will recover.

The tragedy cast a pall over the entire presidential party and the president made only a short address here this noon and this evening.

Arrangements Poor.
For the first time on the trip the presidential party met poor arrangements here.

The pilot car which guided the party 30 miles from here to Crown Point, a site which gives an extensive view of the Columbia river, hit up a pace that approximated 40 miles an hour at times and members of the president's party were fearful for his safety.

The road in spots is very narrow and over steep hills and inclines, and for this reason the drivers were cautioned to preserve a slow rate of speed.

The accident occurred shortly after the president left the Multnomah county fair grounds near the town of Gresham, and this is why it happened:

In every town where the president has spoken, local committees have arranged an automobile procession in advance for his party and all persons on the special train are assigned to a certain numbered car in each town. In car number seven were Messrs. Allen, Small, Reynolds and David Lawrence, the Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post. When they approached number seven car here, they found that the majority of its seats were taken by local townspeople. Mr. Lawrence decided not to go on the drive, while Allen, Small and Reynolds sought another motor and obtained seats in No. 18 in the procession.

On the return from Crown Point, Patterson's car had some engine trouble and was slightly delayed. When repairs were made he attempted to regain his place in line and speeded up. The motor, a large, seven passenger car had a clear roadway for a time, but meanwhile other motorists anxious to glide out from cross roads to trail the president had edged in. One of these was C. H. Barnett and it stalled in the middle of the highway. Patterson tried to avoid a collision but his car was traveling at such a high rate of speed that it left the road.

Mr. Allen was in the front seat as was Patterson. The three other men were in the rear seat and were thrown clear of the car, which after turning turtle, righted itself on the road.

President Wilson was in friendly territory here. There was nothing of the "blue Monday" evident in the reception that the people of this city gave him, both at his appearance on the streets here at nine o'clock in the morning, when he spoke at luncheon and again at night in his address at the Auditorium.

Two short but peppery addresses were made by the president as a result of the warm greetings. He again reiterated that he had not the slightest doubt that the treaty ultimately will be ratified by the senate.

In all of his addresses he emphasized the fact that until the treaty was out of the way there could be no hope of normal conditions prevailing in the world.

Bids for Aid.
He made a direct bid to the reservationists in the United States senate to come to his aid in order that peace might be ratified immediately.

"I call upon them—the honest men, the sincere men—to stand with me and fulfill the hopes and traditions of the United States."

Panama's Mahogany.

The mahogany of Panama is a tree sometimes reaching a height of nearly 200 feet and six feet thick. It often grows in clumps so that it is not uncommon to find it to the number of 10,000 large trees to the square mile. Such a forest of mahogany, however, is rare, although there are occasionally places of this sort. As a general rule, the mahogany occurs in scattered clumps, so that an average of two or three such big trees as those above mentioned per acre is the most that men would expect to find.

DEATH RECALLS FAMOUS DUEL

Grandson of "Dan" O'Connell Used to Tell of "Liberator's" Meeting
With D'Esterre.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, grandson of the "Liberator," died a few days ago at his residence, Darrynane abbey, Waterville, Ireland, in his eighty-fourth year. He was a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for County Kerry, and served the office of high sheriff in 1880.

A Dublin gentleman has an interesting picture of the late Mr. O'Connell holding the pistol which his grandfather used in a famous duel. The following description of the encounter is taken from his own description:

"In a speech at a Catholic meeting on January 24, 1815, the 'Liberator' referred to the Orange corporation of Dublin as a 'beggarly corporation.' D'Esterre, a member of the corporation and a well-known shot with pistols, demanded an explanation, which was refused.

"After consulting his friends, D'Esterre paraded the streets for two days with the avowed intention of horse-whipping O'Connell. The two, however, did not meet, and finally D'Esterre sent Sir Edward Stanley with a message demanding an explanation. O'Connell referred Sir Edward to Major MacNamara, a Protestant gentleman of County Clare, who refused to give any explanation, whereupon Sir Edward Stanley delivered a challenge, which was accepted, and half-past three that afternoon, at Bishop's court, County Kildare, four or five miles from Naas, on the road to Dublin, was fixed for the meeting.

"They met accordingly and fired together, by signal. D'Esterre's bullet went wide. O'Connell aimed low, intending to hit D'Esterre in the leg, but actually did so in the groin. The bullet went through, penetrating the bladder, and came out at the back, inflicting a mortal wound. D'Esterre lived for two days only.

"The pistols used by the 'Liberator' were given him by an English officer, quartered in Dublin, to whom he had done a kindness, and who, when giving them, said, as a proof of their goodness, that they had already killed ten men. They are a pair of 'High's' Particulars,' and Mr. O'Connell often shot at a mark with them, and found them to be very good and accurate.

"D'Esterre's daughter married Lieutenant Roberts of the British royal navy, who commanded the Sirius, the first vessel to go from Cork to America (Boston) under her own steam, and subsequently the President, which was lost with all on board, on the way from New York to Liverpool."

Way of "Parlor Socialist."

When Philadelphia shall have completed its great underground and elevated railway system and also paid for the immense Delaware front improvements, the city debt per person will be around $100.

But in some German cities like Frankfurt and Munich, where socialist ideas ruled before the war, the municipal debts were over six times that amount, writes "Glard" in the Philadelphia Press.

The parlor socialist is a great chap for devising ways to take money out of other people's pockets, but a dead failure at suggesting a method of putting money in your pocket.

One who worked with and knew him well tells me a favorite remark of Maj. Luther Bent was this:

"My board of directors is a board that I direct."

Were the veteran major alive today and operating a big plant he would discover that some sort of a commission rooted in politics would really direct his directors as well as himself.

Pay of British Flyers Raised.

Particulars of the new scale of pay for officers holding permanent or short service commissions in the reconstituted British air force have been made known by the air ministry. A uniform system of rates for all branches (with the exception of certain specialist services) has been adopted, the pay ranging from five shillings per day, for a cadet, to £7 for a general.

The rates, it is explained, have been fixed with reference to the present high cost of living, and it has been decided that 20 per cent of the pay and retired pay will be considered as due thereto, and will be subject, after five years, to change, either upward or downward, according as the cost of living rises or falls. Subsequently revisions will be made at three yearly intervals on the basis of board of trade food prices.

The H. C. of L. in Mexico.

In the past nine years the cost of living in Mexico has shown an average increase of 212 per cent, according to figures recently made public by the department of industry, labor and commerce, an Associated Press dispatch from Mexico City says. Several staples have greatly increased. Lard has advanced 525 per cent in price; sugar, 233 per cent, and eggs, 203 per cent.

Woolen fabrics now cost 471 per cent more than in 1910; cotton goods 300 per cent more and shoes 100 per cent more. House rents have increased 140 per cent, trolley fares 60 per cent and railroad fares 20 per cent. Natives' shoes cost $4.50 a pair in 1910. Today they are $12 a pair.

Taken for Beggar.

One day I was walking through the park and I stopped and asked a man for the time. He put his hand in his pocket and pulled out a dime. That certainly did make me feel like two cents. I looked at him and said: "I wanted the time, please."—Exchange.

LODGE CALLS BORAH BACK TO CAPITAL TO AID IN SENATE

Senator Johnson Speaks to a Large Audience in Des Moines, Ia.

CALLS THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS A WAR TRUST

California Solon Sees "British World"
In Peace Pact—Goes Into an Exhaustive Analysis of the Document
From His Point of View.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 10.—In ratification of the League of Nations covenant as it now stands, Senator Hiram Johnson of California sees the establishment of a "British world."

That's what he told 8,000 men and women who gathered at the Coliseum here to hear him answer the pro-league arguments presented in the same hall nine days ago by President Wilson.

His speech here represented no exception in this regard. The demonstrative part of the crowd roared out prolonged acquiescence with the orator, when he hammered a fist into a palm and shouted:

"By the treaty Great Britain becomes possessed of a fourth of the earth's surface; she gains ownership of an overwhelming preponderance of the peoples of the earth."

"Great Britain proudly contemplates out of this peace a British world," the speaker went on after quiet had been restored. "Shall we who neither ask for nor get anything from the peace, guarantee this British world with our wealth and our man power?"

Again came the shouting from the audience, that finally reduced itself into a hoarse chorus of "nos."

Mr. Johnson denied that the League of Nations was a body calculated to prevent war.

"Actually, it is a gigantic war trust," he insisted. In its very creation it is stripped of every idealistic purpose it ever had. It contains within itself germs of future wars. And, worst of all, it rivets upon millions of peoples a chain of tyranny and cements for all time unjust and wicked annexations."

"The league is a great world economic trust, wherein a few men sitting in secret may control the destinies of peoples. The league does in no place concern itself with peoples whose past wrongs and future rights were so eloquently portrayed by the president."

"The league can never mean the end of discontent or the cessation of war, for peoples held in cruel subjection like the Koreans or Chinese will ever be striving for their liberty and their self-determination, for which we talked so much and did so little."

"This league means that the greatest democracy in the world—our country—must not only continue a party to the denial of these peoples' rights whenever they are asserted, but to our diplomatic denial we will add denial economically, and by force of arms."

"The president tells us we must sacrifice and throw in our destinies with the rest of the world. Why? The very query evokes from league enthusiasts angry retort. But they will not enlighten us. They prefer to hint darkly at our motives, and deny even our good faith."

"We are demanding none of the spoils of war," he cried. "But, in the name of America, let us at least refuse to be treated as part of the spoils. I do not quarrel with our allies for making Germany pay the full price. I do quarrel with those who propose to require our blood and our treasure for all time in the future to preserve the booty of the war to England, France, Japan and Italy."

A Des Moines newspaper attacked the stand of the reservationists as to Shantung; the paper's editor charged that Japan only received railroad and harbor rights, and in no way really encroached upon the rights of China. The senator's answer to this was characteristic. "Any man who defends the Shantung agreement is mentally crooked," he said. "We may not help China directly by refusing to ratify the covenant but, at least, then we will not be a party to a fraud."

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho had arranged to meet Senator Johnson here and speak with him at the Coliseum. The Idaho senator was summoned to Washington, however, by Senator Lodge, who felt that the developments in the capital within the last several days required presence of the full anti-league forces. In a telegram from Chicago Senator Borah wired Senator Johnson that he would keep him in daily touch with the Washington situation and that for the present Mr. Johnson could continue his speaking tour without sacrificing his anti-league interests in the senate.

The Better Maxim.

"Look on your best friends with the thought that they may one day become your worst enemies," was an ancient maxim of worldly prudence. It is for us to reverse this maxim and rather say, "Look on your worst enemies with the thought that they may one day become your best friends."—Dean Stanley.
